Woodley.

Due to the close association of this family with the Crookers, everything indicates that the Mary Milner named in the will of Thomas Woodley is the Milner ancestress, which the Crooker family knew they possessed, according to the account of the family as written by Mr. Crooker. Because he missed a generation, her identity, never became apparent to him. This Milner line also carries a wills line, it will be noted that that John Searsbrook wills was security for John Crooker's as executor for the will of his mother, Sarah Crooker and that Miles Wills was security for William and Joseph Crooker to adm. on the estate of of their sister Molly Crooker. with a little more work, enough information may be gleaned to establish this line, although Hensemond was the the county, from which the Milner family came. This line will give you a still stronger claim for Searsbrook-Martian descent, since they carried the name Searsbrook.

Due to Mr. Andrew Woodley, 600 A. for the importation of himself, his wife and two sons, Henry and Thomas and five negroes. He proved importation for himself four times.

He settled in Little Neck, which lies between three branches of the Pagon Creek, about a mile above Smithfield. Andrew Woodley was a skilled surveyor. In his will he mentions his surveying books and instruments. By order of the Isle of Wight Court, he was requested to assist the commission appointed to run, mark and bound the line between Isle of Wight and Surry counties. He had four children, Henry, Thomas, John and Mary.

estate not being settled until so many years after his death, and he assumed that William Crocker the younger was the son instead of the grandson.

See this account at the Norfolk Library, also his book on the Blunt family, to be convinced that Mr. Rawls is mistaken about your having the Blunt and Carter line.

I am thoroughly convinced that Mary the wife of John Crocker was the granddaughter named in this will, but how am I to prove it. The Milner family is quite a distinguished one and will give you splendid eligibilities, for membership in organizations in which ancestry furnishes the requirements.
